

January 25, 2021

Dear Parents and Students,

Quite a day of weather. Earlier in the year, I communicated that we would still be having snow days this year if that day would come. Today it did with a lot of snow. We will be having a snow day tomorrow. Banks School District will be closed so enjoy a day of playing in the snow and drinking some hot chocolate. Our students deserve a day of winter after this difficult year. As in the past, we will be making up snow days at the end of the year. A day in June where we will have an opportunity to be in person.

All services and buildings will be closed tomorrow, including Limited In-Person and Food Service.

I will be sending out information in the coming days about our hybrid plan and a tentative timeline to returning to in-person instruction. We would like you to have that information prior to virtual conferences at the beginning of next week so we can get an accurate count of in-person students and students who choose to remain online.

Thank you and have a great evening.

Jeff Leo
Superintendent
Banks SD